

when did forcing a station to air a one sided documentary become an acceptable practice in this country? I understand that Sinclair Broadcasting is, in fact, forcing their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary. Regardless of whom I support, this appears to be downright un-American, as well as unethical. I was under the impression that the airwaves are public domain. Shouldn't they then serve the public interest? All of the public? Both Democrats and Republicans? Isn't this type of action (forcing stations to air the opinions and beliefs of the company that owns them) one of the things that the FCC should be looking into?

This action by Sinclair is a great example of how a media conglomerate is controlling democracy itself. This is an outrage and should not be allowed.

Thank you.
